

Feb 26, 1979

The big dilemma at the moment is whether to go into the Peace Corp or not. Here are the pros:

- 1) new experience → leads to new growth
- 2) opportunity to travel
- 3) guarantee of ability to speak "Spanish" fluently.
- 4) avoidance of the "Rut".
- 5) don't want to be left by Tally, Glenn, Ed.

the cons

- 1) making good money → leads to investment → to riches
- 2) like my outside activities TESL, Spanish (will disrupt sign classes, speech club?)
- 3) like my job and there are opportunities for advancement
- 4) I'm 25 - will be 27 or 28 when out of P.C.
- 5) like my apartment, & my "dating" schedule.

The truth of the matter is, is that I am getting into a rut - although my job has potential for advancement, it is not clear when that advancement will be forthcoming.

So is the real question between the ability to invest (this is important, as I don't want to be work dependent for the rest of my life) or to forego that ~~to~~ to experience. The solution is to work out somehow to gain capital to invest while during the 2 year stint w/ P.C.

2 years a long time - yes and a little scary, but I am not a motivate mogul who sees lines of achievements and in all truthfulness one mark of success for me is travel.

Tally leaves Thurs for Germany to do her student teaching, It may be a couple of years until I see her again.

One thing I have learned from my many encounters w/ men on different levels

Feb 26, 1979

The big dilemma at the moment is whether to go into the Peace Corp or not. Here are the pros:

- 1) new experience → leads to new growth
- 2) opportunity to travel
- 3) guarantee of ability to speak "Spanish" fluently.
- 4) avoidance of the "Rut".
- 5) don't want to be left by Tally, Glenn, Ed.

the cons

- 1) making good money → leads to investment → to riches
- 2) like my outside activities TESL, Spanish (will discontinue sign classes, speech club?)
- 3) like my job and there are opportunities for advancement
- 4) I'm 25 - will be 27 or 28 when out of P.C.
- 5) like my apartment, & my "dating" schedule.

The truth of the matter is, is that I am getting into a rut - although my job has potential for advancement, it is not clear when that advancement will be forthcoming.

So is the real question between the ability to invest (this is important, as I don't want to be work dependent for the rest of my life) or to forego that ~~to~~ to experience. The solution is to work out somehow to gain capital to invest while during the 2 year stint w/ P.C. 2 years a long time - yes and a little scary, but I am not a motivate mogul who sees lines of achievement and in all truthfulness one mark of success for me is travel.

Tally leaves Thurs for Germany to do her student teaching, It may be a couple of years until I see her again.

One thing I have learned from my